Trend Alert | S'mores Stations

A timeless camp tradition, it's hard not to love s'mores, whether you enjoy the sweet treat or just the ritual. But you're not limited to only enjoying them at camp! An increasingly popular wedding favor, and a great DIY dessert for a backyard bash, there are several different safe and stylish ways of bringing the classic campfire activity to your next event.

1. Rustic: Fire Pit

For the traditional s'mores feel with a more controlled burn, turn toward fire pits or fire columns to provide the heat. Surround fire pits with chairs, benches, and tables with pre-packaged s'mores ingredients to invite your guests to take a seat and enjoy!

2. Modern: Sterno Cans

Gather around tables, either cocktail height or dining height, and swap centerpieces for a couple of Sterno cans to create a tabletop solution for roasting s'mores. The look is more modern, and it may even be allowed in venues that don't permit fires. Add a tiered tray or stand to each table with a selection of ingredients and roasting sticks to keep everything your guests will need in one place.

3. Creative: Toppings Bar

Turn the simple treat into a full-fledged dessert with a toppings bar. With a selection of spreads, candies, nuts, and more, your guests can get creative with their s'mores. Open up some propane BBQs for an easy walk-up marshmallow roasting station, provide some mugs and urns full of hot cocoa, and don't forget to offer plates, utensils, and napkins in case the creations get messy!

Trend Alert | 4 Stylish and

Fun Fourth of July Party Ideas

It's officially summer, and with less than two weeks until Fourth of July, now is the time to start planning your Independence Day festivities! Keep reading for 4 Stylish and Fun Fourth of July Party Ideas.

1. Beverage Service

In the heat of July, it's important that everyone stays hydrated. Fill big dispensers or pitchers with ice water and disperse them around the party area to make sure your guests stay safe in the warm weather. You can also use glass dispensers as self-serve stations for mixed drinks or sangria with fresh fruits. Or, if you prefer to serve single-serving beverages, fill up big buckets with ice and stock them with bottles and cans.

2. Fun and Games

Something about this holiday manages to get everyone in a playful mood. Be prepared with lots of lawn games and activities for the kids as well. Ring toss is an easy DIY project, tic-tac-toe and Yahtzee have large lawn versions, and water guns and bubble stations will keep kids entertained for hours.

3. Creating Comfort

Since the Fourth of July is usually a day that's spent outdoors, make sure guests are kept comfortable throughout the day and into the night. Sunscreen and bug spray will be appreciated, and setting up lounge furniture and fire pits will have everyone relaxing well into the night as you wait for the fireworks to begin.

4. Fireworks and Sparklers

Every Fourth of July party should end with some sort of fireworks! If you can't bring out the big ones (or don't feel like transporting the entire party to a firework-safe location), sparklers are a fun alternative for guests of all ages. Have plenty on hand for the end of the night when everyone wants to join in on the fun!

Looks We Love | 5 Father's Day Party Ideas

Father's Day is the perfect occasion to throw the first big summer party of the year! Take this opportunity to spruce up the backyard or scout out a great location at your local park and set the tone for this summer's future parties and BBQs! To show dad how much he means to you, think about his favorite things and make the day all about him. Here are 5 of our best Father's Day Party Ideas.

1. For the Grill Master

For the dad that just loves a good BBQ, keep the décor simple and easy. The grill is the main attraction, with the food a close second, so you don't need to add much to make dad happy. Some classic outdoor dining staples, like tables, plenty of seating, and stacks of plates, silverware, and napkins will get the job done. Prep for some fun lawn games and you're all set for a day of fun!

2. For Mr. Fix-It

If the hardware store is dad's second home, throw him a tool-themed bash. Cheap construction hats as bowls, caution tape décor, and clever names for themed snacks come together for a unique theme that will entertain all of your guests.

3. For the Sports Buff

Whether it's his home team or he plays the sport, dedicate the day to dad's favorite. Team colors are an easy option, and baseball, basketball, football, and hockey can all be turned into fun party themes – and possible party activities!

4. For the Outdoorsman

If he would rather be spending his time camping and fishing, make sure father's day reflects those favorite pastimes. If you can't gift him a camping and fishing trip for the weekend, you can still throw a party to remind him of the great outdoors. From Swedish Fish snacks to s'mores for dessert, a little thought and creativity can turn basic supplies into the perfect camp party.

5. For the Super Fan

What's the one thing your dad just can't get enough of? Whether it's superheroes or craft beer, center the day's décor and activities on whatever dad is most passionate about. You may come up with a perfect theme that's unique and specific to the man of the hour – something he is sure to appreciate.

How To | 5 Tips to Throw a Kids Party on a Budget

Throwing a party for the kids in your life is a fun way to help them create memories that will last a lifetime. But you don't need to break the bank to do it! Here are our 5 tips to throw a kids party on a budget.

1. Start planning early

Planning ahead always reduces stress when planning for any kind of celebration, but it becomes even more important when you're planning on a budget. Starting early will give you time to decide what you want to spend the most money on and time to compare prices on items you need.

2. Avoid branded décor

While most kids will surely want their party to be themed around their favorite TV show or movie, that doesn't mean you have to spend your savings on branded party items at specialty stores. Go for coordinating colors for most of your party essentials, with just a few balloons or posters with branded images.

3. Reuse or rent

Since you're now on the lookout for some simple colored plates, napkins, table linens, and other party supplies, see what you can find around the house. If you can't find what you need in your own home, rent what you can to save some money, be a little kinder to the environment, and reduce the daunting clean up tasks.

4. Skip a big meal

Supplying food for all the party guests can add up to a major cost. Instead of hosting a party during lunch or dinnertime, try to aim for mid-afternoon, when the most you'll need to provide is a couple easy snacks and maybe a celebratory cake (bake it yourself for some added savings).

5. Focus on free or cheap activities

Forget splurging on a big bounce house or an entertainer for the kids. They will be plenty entertained with some free or cheap activities, like yard games or simple crafts that they can bring home with them (these can even double as party favors).

How To | 6 Steps to Throw a Woodsy Lumberjack Party

It's officially September, and with the promise of cooler weather on the horizon, you can be sure that the plaid trend will start to heat up once again.

And when you start thinking about plaid, you'll probably end up picturing woodsy scenes and lumberjacks, which can be a fun theme for an outdoor party or a birthday celebration for the little adventurer in your life. Follow these 6 steps to throw a perfectly woodsy lumberjack party!

1. Pick out fitting table settings

Plaid is of course a staple in any of the décor for a lumberjack party, so it's a given that you should dress up your tables with as much plaid as possible! Pair it with burlap and mason jars to create a simple table setting that won't look too over-the-top for a casual outdoor party.

2. Select the right furniture

When hosting a lumberjack themed party, it comes naturally to want to celebrate outside. We have lots of outdoor furniture available, but our Adirondack chairs and tables will help you create the right look. Crowd those around one of our Fire Pits and you'll instantly have a cozy place to make s'mores for dessert!

3. DIY, rent or buy the perfect décor

If you can't host your party in an outdoor space, there are some things you may be able to do to transform an indoor space to look the part. Our Artificial Boxwood Hedges can create a wall of greenery to create the look and feel of an outdoor adventure anywhere. Spruce it up with garlands of plaid or burlap fabric, pine tree cutouts, birch tree printed paper, or actual sticks you find in your backyard!

4. Create cute (and punny) signs

There's virtually no end to the amount of punny signs you can create for a lumberjack themed get-together. It helps people get excited for a party when they can get a good laugh out of it! Put up some clever snack signs (like "bear poop" for chocolates, "twigs" for pretzel sticks, or "ants on a log" for celery with peanut butter and raisins), or engaging welcome signs (like "so plaid you came" or "thanks for chopping by").

5. Serve themed snacks and drinks

Themed snacks are not only good for a laugh, they're necessary to keep your guests well-fed and happy! From Teddy Grahams to pancakes with Log Cabin syrup to good old-fashioned s'mores, there are many snacks that are simple, easy, and probably already available in your pantry that will fit in perfectly at your lumberjack party. For drinks, consider a hot chocolate bar with plenty of flavors and add-ins to customize each drink. And if you're expecting more adults, you can throw some Baileys liqueur into the mix as well!

6. Don't forget the finishing touch – a photobooth

Photobooths always add an extra element of fun to parties, and a lumberjack photobooth is a fairly simple one to create! Start with a buffalo plaid, burlap, or woodsy backdrop, and use props like fake beards, knit caps, cardboard cut-out axes, saws, logs, bears, moose, and more! When it comes to photobooths, you really can't have too many fun props.

How To | 10 Next-Level

Details for Your Wedding

It's all in the details! Which is why you shouldn't overlook these 10 details that will help make your wedding more fun, comfortable, and memorable for you and your guests!

1. Cocktail Tables

If you're planning on hosting a cocktail hour for your guests, consider decking out a separate area with standing-height cocktail tables. That way your guests will have a place to set down their drink and chat with everyone.

2. Cocktail Glasses

Speaking of making cocktail hour special, don't forget how many glassware options you have! If you are serving pina coladas, don't be afraid to rent pina colada glasses! Same goes for margaritas, martinis, old fashioned, brandy, white wine, red wine and champagne. Having the right glassware will make the drinks feel much more special!

3. Chargers

Chargers are often overlooked by brides on a tight budget, but in reality they can end up saving you money! Chargers add a special pop of color and elegance to each table setting at a much lower price than most centerpieces, and can usually add enough interest to the table that you won't end up needing extra votives or linens.

4. Chair Décor

Whether just at the sweetheart table or on all the chairs, a little chair décor can go a long way! Chair sashes, garlands, flowers, and signs all add interest and make for great photos, so you can remember it for a lifetime.

5. Bathroom Kits

Sometimes, even the most beautiful weddings can go downhill for guests with some bad luck. Imagine your cousin rips his shirt sleeve, or your best friend forgot to put on deodorant. A little bathroom kit can be a lifesaver for your guests, and will do wonders in making them feel comfortable and welcomed. Stock a basket or bucket with a couple essentials, like hair ties, bobby pins, deodorant, needle and thread, and your guests will thank you!

6. Seating Chart

While some brides, grooms, and planners consider a seating chart to be another task atop the seemingly endless pile of tasks, it turns out it could be an important one. Even if you don't have to worry about awkward seating arrangements between feuding friends, a seating chart makes everyone feel a little more comfortable and takes away any guessing, so the guests only need to worry about having a great time!

7. Kids Tables

Having a special place for the kids at your wedding will make a more enjoyable event for both the kids and their parents! Stock the table with crayons and paper, and whatever other entertainment you can find. The kids will have a blast, and the parents will be able to mingle with other adults knowing their kids are being entertained.

8. Lighting Décor

Lighting is an important part of wedding décor. Not only does it provide illumination for the event, but it can also create whatever vibe you're looking for. Bare candles have a very rustic and romantic style, while crystal chandeliers can create a modern, elegant feel. Or you can use your lighting to blend the two styles by bringing in one of our wrought iron or distressed wood chandeliers.

9. Backdrops

Depending on your venue, there may be some areas you'd love to incorporate in your event, but don't feel like they have the right look. Using either pipe and drape, boxwood hedges, or another divider, you can create perfect backdrops to fit every corner of your venue into your wedding. Backdrops can also create a dramatic setting for your ceremony.

10. Bar Signage

Pinterest is full of cute wedding signs, and you can admittedly do without many of them. However, it's not a bad idea to keep all those signs for the bar. If it's at all difficult to see or find, your guests will be glad to see a directional sign pointing them toward the cocktail hour, or a big lighted sign making it clear where the bar is. Once your guests get to the bar, you'll need to tell them what's being served. This is especially important if you're providing pre-mixed cocktails, as guests will want to know what they're drinking!
